

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Big Water 5 weight

Re: Big Water 5 weight

Author: : mr7183

Date: : 2014/7/15 17:31:50

URL:

Krayfish and Brookie - thanks a ton for the responses. Really appreciate it.

Kray - I'm in Philly and don't get up there with as much regularity as you. However, my parents are in the Scranton area and whenever I see them I plan to take a ride out there. I'll message you when I do.

I'm leaning more towards a fast, 905... for a few reasons. I want it to have some versatility for smaller streams. I'll be spending a ton of time in State College the next few years for personal reasons and don't want a rod that is too much for the limestoneers out there.

Re: specific models... I've heard great things about the NRX and the Radian. But they seem really expensive. It's great to hear that some of the mid-priced rods also get it done. My first rod was actually a St. Croix Imperial and I have many fond memories with it.