

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Winston BIII LS vs. Sage One

Re: Winston BIII LS vs. Sage One

Author: : Railking

Date: : 2014/7/28 10:44:50

URL:

Thanks JDaddy and John. I'm primarily looking for an all around rod but it will mostly be throwing dries. It will replace a tip flex helios 2 that is just too fast for dries in my opinion. The BIII X sounds like a good bet being slow enough for dries but able to throw buggers in a pinch. Finding a happy medium seems tough in today's fly rod market. They all feel too fast or too slow to me. My superfine touch was an awesome rod for throwing dries at almost any range, but I often find myself fishing dries, nymphs, and streamers through the course of the day. Might try out a mid-flex Helios and see how it feels also.