

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : anybody ever fish the swatara?

Re: anybody ever fish the swatara?

Author: : gemiller

Date: : 2008/12/6 2:16:46

URL:

I fish the Swatara at least once a week. I've caught many small native trout, even a couple in the 6-7" inch range. It's weird though, I'll hit them hard for a week or two and then they are gone and I won't catch another trout for weeks to a month then they will be back.

I catch rock bass and smallies like a dime a dozen but as said the chubs can be intense. But they are a blast to catch. I caught many chubs on wooly bears. Have fought quite a number of 10"+ chubs. And the occasional sunny as always. I've personally not caught a catfish in it yet, but my fishing buddy has caught a couple in a super deep hole below a bridge.

As well as my most entertaining fly catch yet, an 18-20"ish Tiger Muskie.

This stream, even though not the best for trout, is my favorite place to fish. The action is almost always there! If anyone wants to fish it with me feel free to send me a message!