Don't get down about it. Big spring sees a lot of pressure for how small it is. After some weekends it looks like an army marched right along the banks.

Fishidiot's advice of observing the stream is spot on. Don't just sprint up to the water flailing a rod around. Sit back and really analyze the water, and how you should best approach it.

I'm always curious about stories that it was loaded with huge fish. Don't get me wrong, I've seen and caught some large fish in it. Were those storied fish stockies?
