Early 70's my dad and I were fishing Presque Isle Bay. Was using minnows and not doing too good. Can't remember who it was that switched to a night crawler, but we went through two dozen in half an hour. They were hitting any thing from the whole worm to a piece about quarter inch. The worm never got deeper than a few inches. Well we ran out of worms and went back to minnows. Nothing, they didn't want them. So my dad went for more crawlers and even though we were fishing the same spot and surrounding area they quit hitting, only caught two the rest of the day.
