I think that what beginners weren't told is that almost everyone sucks when they first get started. Some blaze by you, like on wings like my son did. The thing I like the most about this sport, should you refer to it as that, is the willingness of others to share information. What's better is it that information is left to interpret. No matter who tells you what you are free to change it up! And that is the best! You can take what you learned and make it your own.
