
Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Monocacy looking good

Re: Monocacy looking good

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2009/2/11 8:03:17

URL:

JackM wrote: "Hmmm.....do I believe the state agency whose job duties, education and training involve drawing these conclusions or do I believe the best guesses of avid catch-and-release fly anglers on a message board. I'll check back in when I have decided which way I'm going to lean."

Ah Hmmm.....this statement is based on the assumption that the FBC regulations and stream designations are based solely on scientific / biologic data, and with the sole objective of optimizing both the size of the trout population and maintaining a natural size / year-class distribution of the trout, and not based, at least in part, on satisfying the majority of anglers that buy licenses and fund the entire system.

I do agree that the PFBC are indeed experts and have a tremendous knowledge of the fisheries and the fish, but I don't believe that very many their decisions are based solely on science; rightfully so in some cases, and wrongfully so in others.