There WAS a time when the LL Fly Shop sold the chenille for the pattern. I have a few bags I bought at the time. I suspect it to be some type of yarn or chenille that you could find in an aisle at JoAnn Fabrics. It looks like something a comfy sweater would be made of.

But hey, the BEST sculpin pattern I ever used is all black so believe me there are other options. While Don' pattern is sweet and I respect his desire to keep it his own; it's just something that like any other fly is useless unless you know how to fish it PROPERLY; which carries more weight than those dumbbell eyes he uses.

As far as hospitality abounding in the shop...after about a million years and many visits Rod will actually talk to me so I guess it isn't the friendliest shop but far from the only one I visited with a less than enthusiastic help.

Hey, maybe it's the PA Dutch influence in the Valley that makes us so...

...unfriendly?
