

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Help: Erie Steelhead Fishing

Re: Help: Erie Steelhead Fishing

Author: : riz

Date: : 2009/2/24 12:31:00

URL:

i would go with a 9' - 10' med to slow action 7wt flyrod. you will need to use faily light tippet, especially if the water is clear. 6lb fluoro would be the most likely, heavier if the water is stained.

as for flies, sucker spawn is usually the most productive this time of year and crystal meth. have a large variety of colors and change often when the bite slows. also single eggs in various sizes and colors. various streams again colors change from day-to-day, even hour-to-hour.nymphs also catch them from time to time. black or gold stoneflies, zugbugs, scuds. presentation is key, so use what works best for trout, for you. whether its high sticking, indicators etc. make sure you are getting deep enough, the fish usually don't move far. as for which stream, find clean water. move from stream to stream to get clear water and good flow. move from hole to hole until you find pods of fish and they are not always in slow deep holes.