

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Stuck Rod

Re: prevention of rod mishaps

Author: : Maurice

Date: : 2006/10/4 20:02:00

URL:

OK here goes....your legs are stronger than your arms.

Take your stuck rod holding it horizontal and put the ferrule behind and between your knees. Keeping your knees together, squat down holding the rod tightly with some sort of rubber grip on the outside of your knees. (use gloves, something that wont slip) Then using the strength of your upper legs, spread your knees apart.

You may experience sweating, shaking and perhaps a brain hemmorage but it works. The key is the grip. Unless you have chicken legs...then it may be a little tougher.

