

---

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Tulpehocken Creek, Berks Co., 2/28/09

Re: Tulpehocken Creek, Berks Co., 2/28/09

Author: : dave1432

Date: : 2009/3/5 20:43:59

URL:

I fished the Tully again at Reber's Bridge today. I picked up 3 on a size 18 bead head zebra midge. The flow was still normal despite the snow run off. They put a lot of nice sized fish in when they stocked, thanks to everyone who helped. As for the bird "problem" what the hell guys? This is nuts. For christ's sakes these birds are just eating to survive. The trout are stocked in there by people and most are released. I for one am actually thankful for the birds to even out the population. I saw a blue heron today and it really got me thinking of this thread. I love trout but I deeply respect nature. Don't kill the birds to enhance fishing which is just a sport, dude that's not cool.