In terms of attractor nymphs, probably the best new (to me anyway..) fly I've fished in the last 15 years is the Pink Squirrel. It originated (allegedly, but who knows) on the spring creeks of SW Wisconsin, but I have yet to fish it anywhere where it did not work very well. I've caught trout on it in WI, IA, PA, OR, UT, NC, TN and WA. It is particularly good in water that is just a tad out of whack or off color or in limestones like the ones in SC PA. And I'll bet there are darn few trout in PA that have ever seen one. And, IMO, that matters...

PS: You don't need the orange antron called for in the pattern, IMO. Plain old fox sq. body is fine
