

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : flourocarbon tippet

Re: flourocarbon tippet

Author: : salvelinusfontinalis

Date: : 2009/3/9 14:44:40

URL:

The next time you go to a crystal clear limestone spring creek on a sunny day, like the Letort, throw you leader in a shallow spot and you will see its shadow. That is where fish become leader shy. Its not that they see it on the surface, they see it on the streambed.

The gimmick is your not supposed to fish a stream like that on a sunny day 😊

Generally speaking, no that wouldnt work for a big fish but then again, thats what the full flex rod comes in 😊

Sometimes you can do that to a big fish though. It all depends which way they start to turn. I have beached Lititz Run size trout in less than 30 seconds. Never a bad idea to have a plan regardless.