

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : flourocarbon tippet

Re: flourocarbon tippet

Author: : jayL

Date: : 2009/3/10 0:41:20

URL:

I'm with justfish. Fluoro isn't worth a damn. I use it for spanish and blues in the salt because they have great eyesight, and mouths full of teeth. I don't fish the salt enough to know if there's a better way, I also use it salmon and steelheading early in the year for abrasion resistance and visibility, but I'm totally unconvinced that it helps.

For trout, it's too expensive, sucks at knots, and sinks like a stone. Fail, fail, and fail.

So, in short, I've fallen for the hype when it comes to types of fishing that I don't know much about or do that well in. For trout, I've seen no improvements in results with the stuff.