Ah yet another attempt to bash spin fisherman..... The streams that I fish for natives in are so small (like 3 foot wide) and remote that I really believe that I am the only person that fishes some of these. So I don't think any kind of "season" is needed to keep the pressure down on them. And most of them would be near impossible to fish with a flyrod. I'm not sure what a "wilderness" stream is, so this might not fall into your category of native streams.
