Here's something interesting I found yesterday that is either indicative of improving conditions or more effective analysis and manpower allocation.

I found a Class A list of unknown vintage although I suspect 1980's; that has the streams listed by STREAM, not section. In any case the list only has 98 streams on it.

Without trying I can easily add another 50-100 I know about off the top of my head.

I guess it really hasn't hurt too much now that all of this more expansive information is available now because I haven't really noticed the additional pressure on the smaller Class A streams NOT on this old list or some of the more famous streams on the list.

I also would have missed many a fine day of fishing if I had to discover all of the added stream names myself.
