I am pretty new to the world of fly fishing. I am currently a student at Pitt law school. For the past 2 months I have been reading this forum and learning all that I can. I have also made friends with my local fly shop guy and purchased instructional books and DVDs. While my casting technique is getting solid, and I am getting much better at tying knots while my fingers are frozen, I have yet to catch a fish. Don't get me wrong. I enjoy my time on the water, and it is quite relaxing just to be outside. Although, I would like to actually catch something at some point. Any pointers about fishing in the Pittsburgh area would be so appreciated.
