Repeating the above, no need for a new high end rod. A excellent source for quality gear at affordable prices is a magazine available at most gas stations called " the paper shop". Lots of good deals on used name brand rods and reels. Alot of folks out there just have to have the latest and greatest. They will sell a perfectly fine rod every few years for huge discounts. I bought my son a sage rod 2 years ago for 50 bucks. Included line and reel.

a good way to learn new waters is to help stock the stream you would like to fish in pre season. You will easily learn access points and a pfbc warden will be there and will be happy to answer your questions. Also you can ask him about access areas for nearby wild trout areas.
