I don't know guys....Every year it's the same old thing....It's the weekend after Mother's Day - Up early in the morning, get the coffee going, take a shower, look at the flyrod against the wall. drink the coffee and think about the days catch. Head to the water and begin to flyfish. someone shares their whisky with you, some more flyfishing, lunch time break, back to flyfishing, someone loses a piece of equipment, the night falls, and we all end the day with a party at night where everyone brags about their catch - trying to out do the previous speaker. It almost seems senseless that we go through this ritual if I may call it that. But it's year after year.

I'LL BE THERE!
