Dear Mike,

Coming up with rules are easy, applying them is a whole different story. There are communities with a voice along the shore that think that bringing in stripers is a birthright. Any rule changes will be fought tooth and nail by guides and charter captains.

One fish 20-28 inches is the daily limit. 15 fish per season per angler, regardless of whether they are caught on a charter or fishing from the rocks somewhere.

If that is ever universally approved I'll probably die. It would require self-policing which we both know happens only on occasion.

Fixing things will take a tremendous amount of effort. Ain't you glad you're retired now?

Take care dude and enjoy your retirement. And please always continue to speak up about the things you spent your career doing. I appreciate the perspective you bring.

Regards,

Tim Murphy 😊
