al, one robin does not make a spring (old polish saying).. or one mayfly does not make a hatch. This is common if you are out on the water a lot. I saw one sulphur on the upper J in february this year.

Those are not grannoms. They are sedges. Internet sites (and flyshop sites too!) have premature declarations of grannoms a week or so before they pop. The sedges have all black bodies and are smaller. The grannoms have a mottled black/light body and are larger
