Why isn't this thread part of "Timing for Spring Hatches"?

Because it preceded the thread about timing.

Moreover, it deals with a specific situation and matter of insect identification. There's nothing wrong with starting a fresh thread that deals with something specific, rather than situating it into an older thread that covers the subject more broadly.

Frankly, it's a bit of a judgement call. Sometimes if a fresh thread deals with the same topic, or asks a question that is already addressed in a fairly fresh thread somewhere else. . . I'll notify the OP to check out the other thread. Sometimes not. In the meantime, we'll leave it be.

I'll probably move it over to the Hatch and Entomology forum once interest moves on to other threads.
