

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Success with Toothy Critters 2019

Re: Success with Toothy Critters 2019

Author: : Fredrick

Date: : 2019/4/25 19:44:17

URL:

You don't have to share the fly I have allot of my musky eater (aka snakehead) flies tucked away in a vault . Don't forget to hit me up for a trip also the guys want to have you back for some tying .

Quote:

fly_flinger wrote:

Quote:

Fredrick wrote:

Quote:

fly_flinger wrote:

Quote:

Fredrick wrote:

Quote:

fly_flinger wrote:

Finally put one in the boat yesterday. It's been since Labor Day last year since I landed one. This 42"er was the first fish on my buddy's new boat. Coincidentally, I christened his last boat with a 42" musky. Wish he would buy a new boat more often...

Nice what fly did you get it on ?

I was cheating and using live bait. Found a spot in Jersey that I could throw a cast net for juvenile snakeheads.

And here I was just telling some of my friends how well your presentation was, I mean I could just post a pic of your fly boxes I took from the meeting and you can pick the one out that assaulted the musky like in a police line up 😁

HAHAHAHAHAHA- Good stuff man.

The fly is a happy little accident I made while trying to copy another pattern. It turned out nothing like what I was trying to copy but it has caught me a few muskies now. And smallies and a good walleye too. It's about 7" long and is mostly black bucktail, tied on a 3" shank with a few feathers for a tail. I'll post a pic when I get a chance. It's nothing special really and that's the good thing about muskies. I don't think they care so much what it looks like when they are hungry, they are going to eat whatever is in front of them.