A good answer from Pennkev. ^

I use a slightly lighter weight line for the drop shot section. This way, if the shot snags or tangles, I can break it off and retain my flies.

Take some time - next time you're out on a sunny day with clear water - to fish your rig in shallow water where you can observe the sink rate and drift position of your flies in various current speeds. This will give you a good idea of what's happening at the end of your line when fishing.
