Good to hear Mike. I have fished the quarry with my buddy the past few years for bass in the summer. Some nice bass in that quarry. No doubt the trout go deep in the summer. Glad to hear they can holdover through the year. I will say some of the brookies caught had great color and all their fins. Could have been holdovers. Also some could have been mistaken for wild they looked so good. I know they werent but they looked good.

P.S. Im sure they could holdover as long as they dont get harvested after first day. Also i was shocked they stocked the Tully a few weeks ago. With those big pally's by the bridge hanging out, people have to see them. I wouldnt be surprised if they get poached.

Either way thanks to the PFBC for stocking a fine quarry with those brookies. It is an enjoyable place to fish and has good bug activity. Also thanks for another much needed year round fishery hear in the southeast. I know i dont thank the PFBC enough for the work they do, but in this case, you guys are doing the right thing 😊
