When i was there on Friday i caught about 16 of them little buggers. I did notice however that the rising fish were on the north and east side of the quarry. Interestingly enough, they only began rising when: there was no wind or blowing in a south/west direction. I dont know why but anytime the wind blew north/east it would put them down. After i caught most the fish on that side of the quarry they stopped rising. You might be right. Maybe they are getting smart. I know Matt has been fishing them also.
