Chaz, with respect to my experiences on some brown trout limestoneers with special regs, that has been my unofficial electrofishing observation as well. Biomass may shoot way up under special regs, but the increase is largely generated by the abundance of 8.5-10.5 inchers. Out of caution I am not going to claim that I have noticed this in all cases, but it seems to be a common response and one, I might add, that does not thrill me since fish in this length range are often common anyway (without special regs).
