What's ideal dry fly weather?

I thought it would be a nice day to hit the stream. It was a beautiful day, but I got skunked! There were fish rising everywhere and feeding on midges and stoneflies yet I was unable to hookup. I stopped at the tackle shop and picked up some 7X tippet to use with my midges. Even with the the 7X on I could see my tippet glimmer in the sun from at least 40 feet away. I thought if I can see it surely the fish can see it and are spooked by it. What does everyone else do on sunny days? Do you just stay home or go out and nymph? Any help assessing this situation would be of great help.
