Letort

as someone mentioned the other day-approach can be tough[very] but the fish are easy risers or something to that effect.

That was certainly my experience during terr. time which is when I fished it.

It is also my favorite stream because in the early 60s it was a magic place to be-except when you backed into the electric fence just south of the interstate.

The wild rose hanging over the bank where a 5pd +- brown slashed over top weeds in inches of water to take a

Letort hopper is my favorite memory in 65 years of fishing-I had her on for at least a second-lol there were a few ornery fish that everybody tried for that wouldn't take,

I thought then an now it was over-rated because everyone said how hard it was to get takers-bullcrap it was easy and full of fish.lolThats why we loved it.

The toughest bar none-Yellowstone river-below Yankee Jim Canyon-like many big rivers-when the bite was off-kitty bar the door.

oops-me and my big finger-didn't mean to step on your line Fish-Idiot-just saw the subject and went with what I remembered-a rookie[dumb one at that ]having multiple fish days[bigguns too]on a stream that was whispered about.I wasn't that good as I found out on Penns-
