dryflyguy,

it's true, I have never hit big Pine when it was just right. I've fished it about 5 times (April/May) and the conditions were always poor. Either water levels were too high for the kind of fishing I like to do, or the air temps too cold...plus lots of wind. I seldomly fish Pine because it's too far for me to travel to roll the dice on conditions. The scenery is spectacular though. That's what drew me to Pine in the first place. I don't doubt the hatches on Pine. Unless you're a local it's tough to time this river right. And like I've mentioned before it's hard to drive past Penns...Love Slate and Cedar though...
