

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Overrated Trout Streams

Re: Overrated Trout Streams

Author: : RLeeP

Date: : 2009/4/9 10:58:10

URL:

>>With that in mind, if your only reason for a stream to be overrated is that the fish are stocked, then the only thing overrated are your expectations.>>

Well, it's all subjective, including the above. Sort of like asserting that a red car is nice, but a blue car is not.

IMO, it all depends on how we (as individuals) define a trout stream.

For me, a trout stream stays a trout stream all year round and does not become primarily a smallmouth bass stream for half or more of the angling season. So, in my view, this eliminates a pile of creeks that include many of our more highly regarded freestones, including half or more of the lengths of Kettle, First Fork, Driftwood, Pine and virtually all of the lengths of such streams as Oil, Brokenstraw, etc. I think they're all over rated and don't understand why people think they're worthwhile.

But then again, I think most red cars are ugly...