Good point, Tom, but there is no rationality to it for me. I just enjoy wild fish more. At the end of the day, I look back on a day of wild trout vs a day of stocked trout, and the wild fish consistently stand out.

The "overrated" streams are just that. It doesn't mean they aren't good. The tully, for example, is a favorite of mine. It's still just a big stocked canal, and given the choice, I'd go elsewhere. Often, I don't have that choice.
