There was a study done over ten years I believe on the Madison River in Montana that proved that stocking even six and eight inchers caused a drop in stream bred trout. That was with rainbows that are less dominate-disrupting even adult browns. They stopped stocking and cut limits and got a Blue Ribbon stream, not a use to be.

However you have to satisfy the just want fish crowd, that pay for the right. I don't envy those caught in the middle-Mike I believe is one-tough job.

I had to laugh at your Disney thing. A fish amazes me how people would rather go there than the Mountains-but like my sister-in-law said when I took her for a drive in the country [beautiful national forest] and asked her why she was reading a book "nothing to see but trees, no houses, stores or people".
