I've been working on my bugger/streamer technique this spring. I've had success now on 3 different outings. One of the things I like best about them is there is no wrong way to fish them. Dead drift, drag across current, stripped upstream or down, you never know what might tickle the fancy of a plump trout.

I hooked a brown Sunday with my back turned to the fish while I was concentrating on making my way back to the bank. I hadn't lifted the streamer out of the water, and bam -- he hooked himself. I'm beginning to see the light.
