Which chest pack have you fished with, and what made it "awkward?"

Admittedly, none, which is why I specified that it "just seems like" it would be awkward; mostly because I'd hate the feeling of having it sitting on my stomach all day long. Its just not something I feel drawn to, and would much prefer to just the vest to distribute it around my body (although, most of that weight will get borne by the neck and shoulders as well).

I agree with you about some chest packs. I tried and hated the kind of VP with a single large pouch up front. My line snagged on it, and it blocked my vision when I look down at my feet when wading or hiking. It was very awkward for me. I use now that VP as my bass outfit.

For trout, I settled on a vest pack with two smaller pouches that sit on each side. They stay out of my way and don't block my vision. I carry a lot of stuff, and my vest pack allows me to do that with comfort. Good fishin.
