Splashy rises forms can mean they are taking emergers. But would'nt use always and never for fly fishing descriptions.

I probably have the hardest time with "emerger" fishing. Have heard lots- of getting the flies to sit low in the film of the water trying to mimic a bug breaking throught the surface tension of the water. Heard of some guys trying to get there flies to go under the water and get them (or try to get them) to pop back up to the surface.

Recently started fishing wet flies and that can get you into some fish that emergers. Have it done it enough to elaborate really any further though.
