enfausn,

You may know a strike indicator by it's, ahem, other name.. "bobber". But you didn't hear that from me. It can actually be anything from a colored mark on your fly line to moldable floating clay to pinch on foam dots. It is a way to "show" where your leader is drifting and how it's drifting, especially when using nymphs and subsurface flies. Some people dislike using them others swear by them. In your case I would recommend trying it out.
