I just picked this up tonight and later found this thread. This is apparently a popular book at least in the fly shop I frequent. I was looking through this and was impressed by the work, I've needed a book like this to get better at identifying insects. I know some basics but I really want to expand my knowledge and I love the quick reference type of format. Like tom, I don't care much about the Latin, but care more about size, color, what to look for when, etc.

Great stuff, it will find its way to the backpack, no doubt.
