The other day I missed about 15 fish in 2 hours; some fish multiple times, and I realized that I wasn't following my own trick. Another gentleman on the stream suggested that I didn't try and set the hook and let the fish have it. However, let's face it, we often don't set the hook anyway, the fish do. We merely plant it in a little farther. But anyway, as he was telling me this, I was bending the point of my hook sideways and continued fishing. I ended up catching 3 fish right in front of him, of which he took the credit. However, I thought it odd that he didn't catch those fish first!?!?
