triple surgeon even works on braid to mono but I don't recall a blood or half blood knot ever failing before tippet to fly so I always went with the smallest and fastest when tying heavy to lighter

That's the half blood-TETO

but I always used a three foot tippet which is a fly fishers shock tippet so the fly to tippet was the weakest point-shorter tippets and you lose that factor-you might want to try the three foot tippet and MONO really cuts down on lost fish even with a 5 foot sinking line streamer leader.

If you want to get really sneaky-double the lighter tippet material at the blood.

that way you can use 2 foot of 20 tied to 3 foot of 8 for streamer leader with sinking lines.
