I got skunked on a small mountain stream this Saturday in northwest NJ. I'm hoping the cold front and the fact that I didn't see any fish are the reasons for this.

What do you guys do about weight on those streams when your nymphing? The rock beds are a lot more jagged and dynamic than of other streams, how do you get the nymphs down in the ruck cracks without getting hung up? Or...am I totally taking the wrong approach to nymphing these streams?
