In off color conditions, you can usually get away with nymphing with 4x around here. If the water is particularly clear, I will go with 5x. Rarely do I nymph with 6x.

Fishermen around the lehigh valley tend to use very light tippet. This is also common on the tully. I've personally never felt the need to drop below 5x for nymphs, and 6x for dries. I would start with a stronger material, and lighten it up if you feel you should be getting more strikes.
