I agree with you guys... fly-fishing is challenging enough, no reason to tilt the odds towards the fish with spider web tippets.

I fish nymphs and wets in tandem a lot (in the Lehigh Valley) and most often use a leader tapering to 4X for the drop fly and then a 5X tippet off of that to the point fly. I'll go 3X - 4X in high and/or off-color water.

6X stays tucked away unless I get talked into Trico's or midges. 🍷

Don't worry surveyor06, the trout can see your tippet no matter how small it is... they can pick out the mite crap in the fly crap... hopefully they'll never be smart enough to realize what's standing on the other end.
