

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Little Lehigh, Lehigh County 6/10/09

Re: Little Lehigh, Lehigh County 6/10/09

Author: : jayL

Date: : 2009/6/16 16:29:18

URL:

Quote:

Dizzy wrote:

Quote:

by jayL on 2009/6/16 16:09:54

Address my claim that trout mouth and reject simple objects from sticks to bubbles to pebbles before we continue. At that point, we'll discuss whether fish spawn in the stream. Those trout certainly wouldn't lower themselves to eating eggs... no way.

You want—or need--my acknowledgement? Aw, they are so cute when they're young.

Just go catch the fish... that's all you have to do. It's what we call... "a challenge."

Man up.

I only talk about pissing contests on the internet. Not sure if I'll make it "irl", as they say.

You continue to skirt any of the actual points I've made. Is this another superiority complex thing you've got going for yourself?

Still spinning... spinning... spinning.

Sorry, I don't usually fall for the alpha male tactics. I've got no interest in your "man up" challenge, though I'd really like to know whether those fish would eat an egg. It's not like they are predisposed to do so through by instinct or anything. We certainly would be disappointed if that hampered our fish tales and sense of home stream pride. Keep personifying the fish. Maybe they'll make friends with you!

It's ok. Valley is my home stream. I don't tell anyone that they eat junk flies. It's far too embarrassing.

edit:

You simply don't have any ground to stand on with your claim that the magical trout of the bushkill will "never" eat an junk fly. Sorry, but you don't. Thanks for letting me troll you for a while, but I'm bored of it now. Until next time...