

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Wading Shoes, Light But Tough

Re: Wading Shoes, Light But Tough

Author: : limestone

Date: : 2007/4/17 13:09:09

URL:

I got a pair of the Orvis Easy-on Battenkill Brogue wading boots for Christmas. So far I've been really happy with them. They might be a little bigger/heavier than what you are looking for, but they are extremely durable, offer great support, and easy to slip on and off thanks to the zipper on the side. You literally tie you laces once when you first wear the boots and never have to mess with them again. These boots are also very well insulated, my feet didn't get cold this winter.