Troy, for what its worth, don't worry about it. When I tie for leisure I tie slowly and enjoy making everything look perfect and adding this and that's. Your speed will pick up as you tie more and more. Also the first several times you tie a new pattern it will take you longer to tie. Keep with a pattern until your familiar with it and then move on to something else. That will also make you more proficient. When I tie commercially it's more of a chore and that's where organizing your materials, laying out your stuff etc comes into play. I still enjoy it but the repetition of tying 4 dozen of the same flies all at once isn't as fun.
