On the river again today, temp in Ohiopyle 66 at 5 pm on a cloudy day. Not bad. But you have to consider that the Casselman has been peaking at around 80 each day. That's a big charge of warm water. Add to that all the exposed mid-river rock getting charged by the sun all day and you're going to have warm temps. Any time the discharge gets below 600 this time of year that bottom section of the middle gets a bit sketchy with regard to temps.

It fished really well today until the storms came through--oddly enough. It shut down for about three hours until the sun came out--oddly enough again.

All said and done we had around forty fish in the boat, with a third of the being bass.
