

---

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : carp

Re: carp

Author: : Pittflyguy

Date: : 2009/8/1 20:44:42

URL:

Carp flies in general are not typically huge, so leave the salt water clousers behind! Clouser Swimming Nymph's, Wooly Buggers, any small crayfish type pattern, Bonefish flies in brown's and black's... all typically work well. If they are "clooping" then dry fly's will work as well.

I highly recommend the book referenced that started this thread, great piece of education and you walk away with a much better understanding of it all

My biggest mistake was getting frustrated trying to target cruising carp that really were not feeding and you have very little chance of hooking up with.

It is so much like fishing for bonefish just with brown water and bigger fish! Total Carp addict now. Added bonus is that you can often hook up with some great cats while you are targeting carp and again, good size, great fight!