Thanks.

I'll have to hit the vise to tie some soon.

Years ago, I read an article in fly fisherman about "go2nymphs". The basic idea is to replace the white biots with antron or poly.

I'll let you know how it works on steel.

so pretty much a zug bug with a black biot tail lol.

I too have to hit the vice again. Tied up about 40 eggs a few weekends ago. The princes are time consuming so I usually set up a TV tray and watch a movie I've already seen and crank some out.

I got my eggs to about 13-15 an hour. When I started tying a GRHE took me 45 min lol.
